

Dr Alain Safa is specialized in macroeconomics and international finance, professor at the University of Nice Sophia-Antipolis and EDHEC Business School. He is the founder and manager of "Skill Partners", a research and advisory organization. He works on the capacity of countries to adapt to major economic, environmental and social changes. He participates to European and international research projects. His studies focus on the integration of environmental considerations into national, regional and international governance. The exploration of ocean acidification and analysis of their economic and social impacts have become a central concern of his research today.

ALAIN SAFA

